

Comprehensive Bibliography for a Model Curriculum on Empathy

Lou Agosta. (1976). "Intersecting language in psychoanalysis and philosophy," International Journal of Psychoanalytic Psychotherapy, Vol. 5, 1976: 507-34.

_____. (1977). Empathy and Interpretation. Ph.D. Dissertation. Philosophy Department. University of Chicago.

_____. (1978). "Kant's treasure hard-to-attain," Kant-Studien, Vol. 6, No. 4: 422-43.

_____. (1980). "The recovery of feelings in a folktale," Journal of Religion and Health, Vol. 19, No. 4, Winter 1980: 287-97.

_____. (1984). "Empathy and intersubjectivity," Empathy I, ed. J. Lichtenberg et al. Hillsdale, NJ: Lawrence Erlbaum Press.

Aristotle, "On dreams" in Loeb Classical Library: Aristotle VIII: On the Soul, Parva Naturalia, On Breath, tr. W.S. Hett. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 1936. [First occurrence of the word empathesteros that I was able to find.]

Kenneth Appel & Wolfgang Haken (1977). "Solution of the four color map problem," Scientific American, vol.237 no.4: pp.108-121, October 1977. [Changes the meaning of "proof" by introducing hundreds of thousands of hours of computer calculation, not surveyable by a human intelligence in her or his life time, which may be similar to using a fMRI machine to capture empathy.]

Anna Aragno. (2008). "The language of empathy: an analysis of its constitution, development, and role in psychoanalytic listening," Journal of the American Psychoanalytic Association, 2008; 56.

Hannah Arendt. (1926/65). Love and Saint Augustine. University of Chicago Press, 1996. [The love of the early Christians is different than empathy, yet is relevant as the foundation of an empathic Christian community.]

Hannah Arendt. (1971). The Life of the Mind. New York: Harcourt, 1978. [Just read it.]

Hannah Arendt. (1971). Eichmann in Jerusalem. New York: Viking Press, 1971. [Himmler had a sort of negative empathy, used to exhort his soldiers to the tough work of murder (ghastly stuff but relevant).]

John L. Austin. (1946). "Other Minds" in Classics in Analytic Philosophy, ed. R.R. Ammerman. New York: McGraw-Hill, 1965: 353-78. [A famous footnote refers to a "special counter-part feeling."]

F. Baez. (2008). A Universal History of the Destruction of Books: From Ancient Sumer to Modern Day Iraq, tr. A. McAdam. New York: Atlas, 2008. [Just another example of contingency (thrownness) – the good guys do not have to win – struggle and effort are required.]

G. Spencer Brown. (1969). The Laws of Form. New York: The Julian Press, 1972. [The idea of a single distinction – not the Sheffler stroke but a tad like it – generating a body of knowledge such as the propositional calculus is relevant to the propositional theory of the emotions, which, in turn, is a disputed part of the background for empathy.]

John D. Caputo. (1987). Radical Hermeneutics. Bloomington and Indianapolis: Indiana University Press, 1987.

S. Carere and J. Gottman. (1999). “Predicting divorce among newlyweds from the first three minutes of a marital conflict discussion,” Family Process 38, no. 3 (1999): 293-301. [Cited by Paul Ekman in Emotions Revealed, in turn, cited by Malcolm Gladwell in Blink – relevant because one way of explaining empathy is that it gives us enhanced access to micro expressions – one person captures something of which the other is contingently, transiently unaware.]
